Woodcrafters put on demonstration of their art

Nash told the Express that he has been working in this feild for more than ten years now, not only fashioning beautiful canoes like the one in the photo, but also snowshoes and toboggans. He picked up much of this woodcraft art from the ¼ Mishquabe Indians of Northern Ontario. This particular canoe, known as a Malecite Canoe, is very popular in the New Brunswick-Maine areas of Eastern Canada and the U.S.

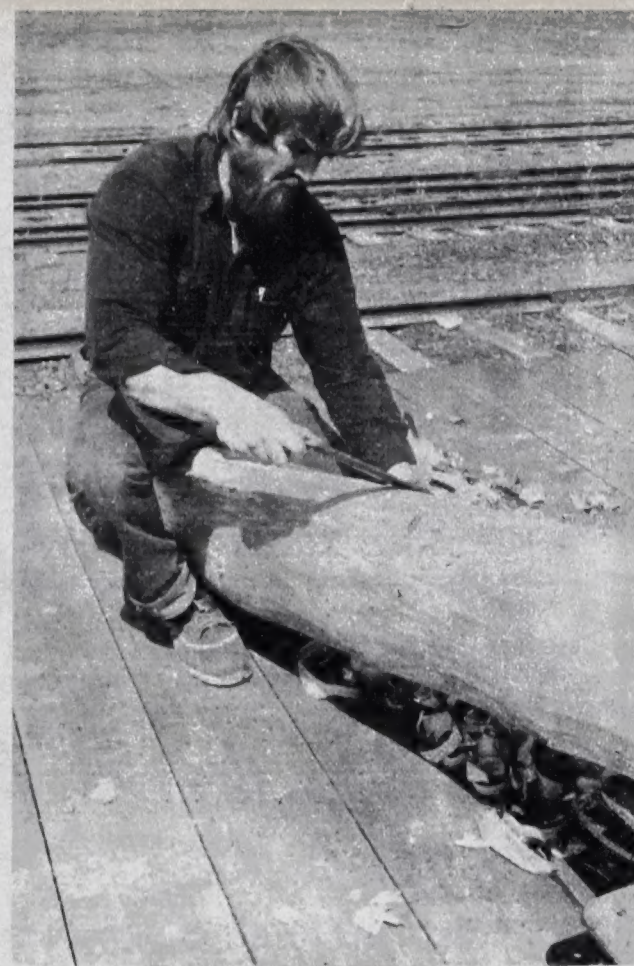

Mr. Kenney reminded everyone that the "Blair Hampton Alternative" near Haliburton, will be holding an open house on the long weekend of May 17, 18 and 19th everyone is welcome to come out and see the model log buildings, solar heat designs, 2 kw wind generator and tool demonstrations.

Membership in Carnarvon Group hits 66% at meeting

Sixty-one enthusiastic citizens of Metro Carnarvon launched the newly-formed Metropolitan Carnarvon Board of Trade and Wine Tasting Society at its second mass meeting held last week in midtown Carnarvon.

Representing 33 of the more than 50 businesses in the new Metro area, the group was unanimous in its support of the M.C.B.T.W.T.S. concept of a businessmen's association. All 33 paid their charter membership dues and enthusiastically endorsed publication of the organization's proposed newspaper: The Metro Carnarvon Cliffhanger. A comprehensive layout of the new tabloid was on display at the meeting.

"This is the most exciting thing to happen in this area since the ice age," said Eileen Crawford owner of Hart Lodge on Scenic 35 highway near the south border of Metro. "I really think it's going to work for us."

First paid Charter Membership went to George Hector's Coffee shop on Hwy. 35 near Hall's Lake. Owner Art Jones interrupted The business meeting to announce his intention to be Number One in this new venture.

George Hector is the only Musk Ox in Haliburton County" claimed Jones, "and we'd like to see his name at the top of the list of members in this society."

The M.C.B.T.W.T.S. is a combination business and fraternal organization whose objective is to generate more local and tourist traffic to Metro Carnarvon businesses and to enjoy some post-meeting wine-tasting and socializing to help maintain the easy informal atmosphere and group spirit which was evident at last Tuesday's meeting.

Chairman Bob Jennings of Sandy Lane Resort in North Metro Opened the meeting by proposing a toast to the temporary Mayor of Metro Carnarvon, Ali Hogg of Mrs. Foggs fine foods.

"We hope that all 50 or more businesses in the area will join soon," said Mayor Hogg after the business meeting, "But I think they will if the enthusiasm of the people here tonight is at all contagious."

Chairman Jennings pointed out that some of the businesses in Metro Carnarvon offered services that were the only ones of their kind in Haliburton county

Metro Carnarvon has the only bowling Alley, the only blacksmith, the only Shoe Repair, the only Flying School and the only Newspaper.

Printer in Haliburton County" Jennings told the meeting, "And tonight you're going to be entertained by another exclusive — the Metropolitan Carnarvon Symphony Orchestra."

The symphony turned out to be two members of a three man Windsor-based bluegrass band called the Cedar Creek Alternate. Dan Branch and Dave Swanson alternated between guitars, banjos harmonicas, whistles and great bluegrass singing which contributed to a late but happy adjournment of the Metropolitan Carnarvon's Board of Trade and Wine Tasting Society's Second Mass Meeting. There will be more.

Sky diving coming to Stanhope Airport

STANHOPE — The opening of a new skydiving and parachute jumping centre at Stanhope Municipal Airport was agreed upon at a special joint meeting on Sunday of Air Haliburton, The Parachute School of Toronto and the Stanhope Airport Committee. All three participants agree that a sky diving operation would be a strong and unusual attraction for both local and seasonal residents and visitors. Stanhope council has already approved the operation on principle.

Lloyd Kallio, owner and president of the Parachute School of Toronto said after the meeting that parachute jumping and sky diving are the fastest-growing participation sports in America. The Haliburton drop zone will be operated in conjunction with Air Haliburton Limited who will be doing all the airplane flying for the new school.

The primary drop zone for the Parachute School of Toronto is located at Arthur, Ontario which is about 100 miles north-west of Toronto and serves an area as far west as Chatham. The Haliburton branch is expected to draw jumpers and students from an area between Toronto and Belleville, Muskoka, Hastings and North Bay.

Derek Rolfe, Stanhope Township's Airport safety officer is enthusiastic about this latest development at the airport. "It should really help expand the action and increase the number of people who use the airport" he said "and that's what the airport needs."

Jim McLean, president of Air Haliburton said that he is pleased the Airport Committee and Stanhope Council are in favor of the new joint venture. "Air Haliburton has been working with the Parachute School at its Arthur base for the past year and a half", McLean pointed out "Our Cessna 206 has been almost exclusively on contract for jumpers during that time".

Last year the Arthur Drop Zone processed over 1,200 first jump students. The Stanhope Drop Zone is scheduled to begin operating on June 1st.

Canadian Comment

BY PETER WARD

OTTAWA (SF) — One of the hidden goofs the government of Former Prime Minister Joe Clark made was in dropping the ball on the development of alternate energy sources. The failure was underlined, just a week after the election, when the Ontario government appointed a task force to examine the future of hydrogen as an energy currency.

Hydrogen can be created from any energy source. It will be the "forever fuel" of the future in the view of many experts. Canada has a lead in the technique of making hydrogen through the electrolysis of water, converting electric power into a portable energy which can fuel cars, trains, planes, or trucks.

Ontario, squeezed hard by the energy crunch, has moved to make herself part of the new technology, and she stands a very good chance of becoming a world leader. The political appeal of a government moving decisively in the face of the energy pricing bind, into a field which is pollution free, and is loaded with export potential, might just be enough, politically, to save the government of Ontario Premier William Davis when election time comes.

The Clark Conservatives had the same opportunity, perhaps a better one.

Early in the mandate of the Clark Government, key ministers were given detailed briefings on hydrogen and its potential. They went to senior civil servants for advice, and hydrogen received a lukewarm reception. There may have been ulterior motives on the part of some of those civil servants, because there is competition between Ontario and Quebec in the hydrogen field. The Tory ministers, however, did not have the vision to appreciate the political appeal of hydrogen.

Had they coupled their higher energy price policies with some hard evidence that something was being done about alternate energy which would give Canada a leading place in the industrialized world, Canadians might have been ready to make the necessary sacrifices on a short-term basis. Hydrogen proposals, unfortunately, were given the kiss of death by Mr. Clark's senior advisor Jim Gillies, leaving Ontario to pick up the ball.

The first hydrogen proposals went to the Clark government in late August of last year. Ministers were still waiting for civil service reports four months later, and, of course, by that time it was too late. Maybe the more politically astute Liberals will pick it up, but if they do, count on Quebec having the inside track.

New elevating devices act gives private sector more responsibility

The new legislation will also clarify the duties and responsibilities of owners

The ministry of industry and tourism has devised a new communications program to ensure that small businesses in Ontario are aware of the nature and availability of the programs and is even offering the services of John Laschinger, director of its small business development branch, to help them negotiate their way through the red tape when trying to procure government contracts. "We are ready and willing to pull out all the stops," says Laschinger, "but before we can do anything, we have to be made aware of the specifics of the problem. The simplest and most direct way is by a phone call, and then we'll take it from there." Laschinger can be reached at 965-5494 and collect calls will be accepted.

"Elevating devices were once maintained exclusively by the manufacturer," said Mr. Drea. "Today, with the large number of elevators in use this type of exclusive maintenance isn't possible. The job is also being done by maintenance contractors who compete freely among themselves for the right to service elevators and lifts."

Maintenance is one of the major target areas for the regulations. To ensure that safety standards are maintained the new legislation

Recreation Committee meets

MINDEN — The 5th meeting of the recreation committee was held last week and they received a letter from Faye Mansfield advising that she was resigning.

Representatives from the local baseball teams advised that the ball diamond was very rough and uneven and required top soil. It was learned that 10 to 12 loads would be available this year and also next.

The committee, specifically, the chairman and secretary-treasurer were instructed by motion, authorizing them to execute a contract with Shadow Productions for ice surface promotions in 1980.

Advertising for non-profit groups and organizations received permission from council that they be permitted only to post notices and advertisements at no cost within the arena. The rental fee for advertising shall apply to all other types of businesses.

The committee passed a motion that the grant of $10 per child be paid to the hockey club in the total of $1250. Since the committee did not increase the ice rental rates to the hockey club and figure skaters for 1980, the committee agreed that no further grant program would be considered for the season and the clubs be properly notified.

Cottage burns near Kirkfield

KIRKFIELD — A cottage here burned to the ground last weekend while one neighbour slept through the whole incident, according to Cobocok OPP.

Details are vague at press time as damage estimates and the owner's name being unavailable. Kirkfield firefighters were unable to save the building in a two and a half hour battle. The cause is believed to have been overheated stovepipes.

The cottage was located on Hargrave Beach near Shallamar.

Ask Alma

Dear Alma:

Through deceit and lies, my wife's foreman talked her into having an affair with him. Is there any law which protects women from such injustices by management? What would you advise me to do? — Livid Louie

Dear L.L.:

Sexual harassment is a violation of Title 7 of the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Act. Take your wife and complaint to the nearest E.E.O.C. office. In your case, take it to: Suite 200, 127 N. 4th St., Philadelphia, Pa. (Phone: 215-597-7784.) E.E.O.C. will advise you and file your charges, if you have a case.

Dear Alma:

The custom of covering your head with a little skull cap in a Jewish church seems very unsanitary to me. The hat is taken from a common box and returned after the service. Aren't the Jews concerned about bugs and the distribution thereof? — Clarksville, Tex.

Dear Clarksville:

I checked with a local rabbi for his opinion. Besides being a humanitarian, he's a funny guy and said that no self-respecting bug would want to live in such flimsy fabric as that used by skull-cap or 'yarmulka(sic)' manufacturers.

The person who orders supplies for the synagogue added that the "used" ones are rarely more than three wearings old since one-third of the congregants wear the hats home by mistake each week.

However, both were sure the subject has never come up before. You've scored a first on a two thousand-year-old tradition.

Share your questions, problems or difficult decisions. ASK ALMA will respond in this column. Write to ASK ALMA, P.O. Box 43, Closter, N.J. 07624 and watch for the answer in this paper.

On Sports

BY JOHN DALTON

What's it like moving from New York to Seattle?

Nice, according to pitcher Jim Beattie. The 25-year old right-hander figures prominently in the 1980 starting rotation of the Seattle Mariners.

It's tough for a young hurler to make the New York Yankees staff. Over the past few seasons, the Yankee roster has featured pitchers such as Catfish Hunter, Sparky Lyle, Rich Gossage, Tommy John, Luis Tiant and Rudy May.

Beattie had been trying to make the climb into the big leagues since 1975, when he signed a pro contract after his junior year at Dartmouth College.

He must have felt like a yo-yo in the process. In 1978 and 1979, he made the trip between Triple A and the Big Apple no less than three times each.

"I had a fair chance with the Yankees, and did part of what I wanted to do," Beattie says. "And in other parts I was frustrated. I was at least getting some of the major league experience."

"But I never really felt like a part of the Yankee team during all that time except when I was actually contributing something at the end of the 1978 season, in the playoffs and World Series championship. Other than that, it was tough because I was the only rookie at one point.

"Not being able to pitch very much except for a month and a half, I just felt like another body," Jim notes.

Sports View

LINDA FRATIANNE, silver medalist in figure skating at the 1980 Olympics, is hoping to earn more than honors as Queen of the Ice. With a pro contract, she expects skating to become an even bigger part of her life.

The trade to Seattle is a new chance for Beattie — and a change of scenery. He grew up in Maine, went to college in New Hampshire, and played for the Yankees. Now he moves to the West Coast.

"I can't be happier," he claims. "There's just so much of an opportunity here. You can only take so much of hearing 'this is the year,' then 'this is the year' again. Finally it looks like I'm getting the chance to really find out what I can do."

The 6-foot, 6-inch Beattie was quite a basketball player at Dartmouth.

"My coaches told me that I had a chance to play basketball professionally — but not much of one. Because of that, it wasn't a difficult decision when I was drafted by New York and handed a chance to play."

Beattie doesn't rely on any one style of pitching. On some days, he can get by with just his fastball and slider. But on days when he doesn't feel overpowering, he adjusts to the slider, sinker, change up style of pitching.

This flexibility may be a key for Jim. It's just the kind of thing the Mariners are looking for.

OASA softball clinic slated for April 27th at H.H.S.S.

Minor Hockey—new initiative

TORONTO — The Ontario government will spend up to $2 million over the next three years to improve the quality of minor hockey in the province. The money will be used to improve basic skills, to upgrade the knowledge of coaches and referees and to try to improve the atmosphere surrounding the game.

The government support came from Culture and Recreation Minister, Reuben Baetz, following the presentation of a report and recommendations on the quality of minor hockey in Ontario. The 107 page report was prepared by the Ont. Hockey Council after a year long study of parents attitudes and a series of public forums.

During a Queen's Park press conference, Mr. Baetz said, "we want to see a hockey environment where children, both boys and girls can participate, in a spirit of enjoyment, education and healthy competition."

The money will be administrated by the hockey council, a co-ordinating group for regional and local associations. The fundings will be in two parts, one a total of $900,000 over three years as part of the base funding for the OHC and up to $1.1 million over three years from lottery profits.

In preparing their report the OHC first surveyed 31,000 parents of young players by mail asking for their written opinions of the state of minor hockey. This was followed by public forums on hockey held in 30 Ontario communities.

Here is a sample of conclusions proposed by the OHC: There should be at least two practise hours for every game played. There is too much specialization too early. A player should be encouraged or required to play all positions including goaltender in the early years of hockey involvement.

Modern, Snifflers, Woodchoppers lead league playoffs

CARNARVON — In three of the top bowling leagues here, the playoffs are now underway with some great games rolled. Most impressive performance after two weeks is Jim's Barber Shop who have completely dominated every team. They have rolled a six game score of 7041, almost 300 pins better than any other team.

Second place in the B series is Guilford Recreation with 6702 and third place goes to Ingoldsby with 6599.

In the A series, Modern Electric is continuing its play with a score of 6880. In second is PL with 6677 and third is Carnarvon Lanes with 6467.

In Maple Lake mixed league opening round play-off action, the A series is up for grabs. The Woodchoppers came through in fine style in their 3rd game, rolling 1350 to give them a 219 pt lead over the Happy Endings 3585 to 3364. Third place belongs to the Shinytops with 3205.

In the B series the action is much closer as the Lucky Strikes did just that in posting a 1350 game to take a 12 pt. lead over second place Pennypinchers 3549 to 3537. Third place is the Sure Shots with 3088.

On Thursday evening the Vankoughnet mixed league completed six games of action and the A series leaders are the Snifflers with 6632. Second place goes to the Tom Cats at 6089 and far back in third are the Rootie Toots with 5803.

The B series leader is the Seven O'Clock Express with a six game total of 6265 followed by the Glory Seekers at 6131 and then the Trailblazers at 5685.

Coaches must stress the teaching of skills, sportmanship, how to accept defeat, and the spirit of competition, rather than stressing winning. All coaches should be certified and evaluated.

Parents must cease the abuse they direct toward officials. Parents "should be seen and not heard" in the arena.

A reduction in travel, the number of games, and in the length of the season must take place.

In minor hockey, a penalty for highsticking should be called whenever the stick is raised above the waist except in the act of shooting. The puck is on the ice, not around the shoulders.

Commenting the change, Mr. Baetz said, "we could create a completely public council that had no direction representation from organized hockey, but I think the best of all worlds is one in which the public at large works with organized hockey in an independent body."

It is proposed that four public representatives will be placed on the OHC Board of Directors in addition to the representatives of the eight hockey associations around the province. The public positions will be appointed through the office of the Minister of Culture and Recreation and Mr. Baetz said the new appointments are there to ensure the general public has say on the development of minor hockey in the province.

Campus protests should fizzle

By W. Roger Worth

Spring has arrived on university campuses across the country and restless students have turned to the annual rite of protesting upcoming increases in tuition fees.

In the 1960s, students were battling such gut issues as the Vietnam war. Now they vent their spleen on the university officials and governments that have been forced to raise tuition fees by about 10% to keep up with inflation.

The students, it seems, are mad.

Roger Worth is Director,
Public Affairs,

Canadian Federation of Independent Business.

But somehow, it's difficult to sympathize with the campus crowd.

Beleaguered Canadian taxpayers already pick up about 85% of university education bills, with additional support for needy students available through a variety of special assistance programs.

In most cases, university tuition costs less than $800 - $1,000 per year, depending on the faculty. Taxpayers kick in another $4,000 or so per student.

Canadian students should look around before they start protesting fee increases that simply match the inflation rate.

Bennington College in Vermont, for example, is now charging a whopping $7,380 per year. While that's among the highest in the U.S., universities such as Yale, Princeton, Stanford and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have tuition fees of $6,200 or

BEAUTIFUL YOU

How to grow long hair

BY RENE VINCENT

Tired of short hair? A lot of girls are — despite the trend to short hair this summer — and expect to have their hair grow in beautifully with the help of their hairdresser.

Many hairdressers will suggest an 18-week program. On your first visit, your hair will be trimmed. This will be followed up six weeks later with a special condition treatment and a second condition treatment in another six weeks.

At the end of the 18-week period, your hair will be trimmed again and styled. In more per year. And that's in U.S. funds.

Canada's students don't understand how well off they are.

Supported and subsidized by millions of taxpayers who never had the chance to attend university, this country's students are being given a glorious, low-cost opportunity to enhance their future earning power.

Instead of protesting higher tuition fees, Canada's students should get on with their studies. Otherwise, taxpayers may start to feel university students are being coddled.

Short Takes

It's pretty hard to be anything but frugal and circumspect in your actions considering what your money won't buy.

this way your hair will not only grow in faster but will be in good condition and look and behave beautifully.

This is something you really can't do on your own. You can't assume you can go to your salon once every 18 weeks for a trim and do your own conditioning treatments at home and produce the same results.

In most cases you will need the services of a professional with specialized knowledge to choose the proper conditioner. This is because the condition of your hair changes as it grows and the treatment should also be changed accordingly.

If handled with care, however, this program can enable most women to grow their hair in beautifully with results she can really be proud of.

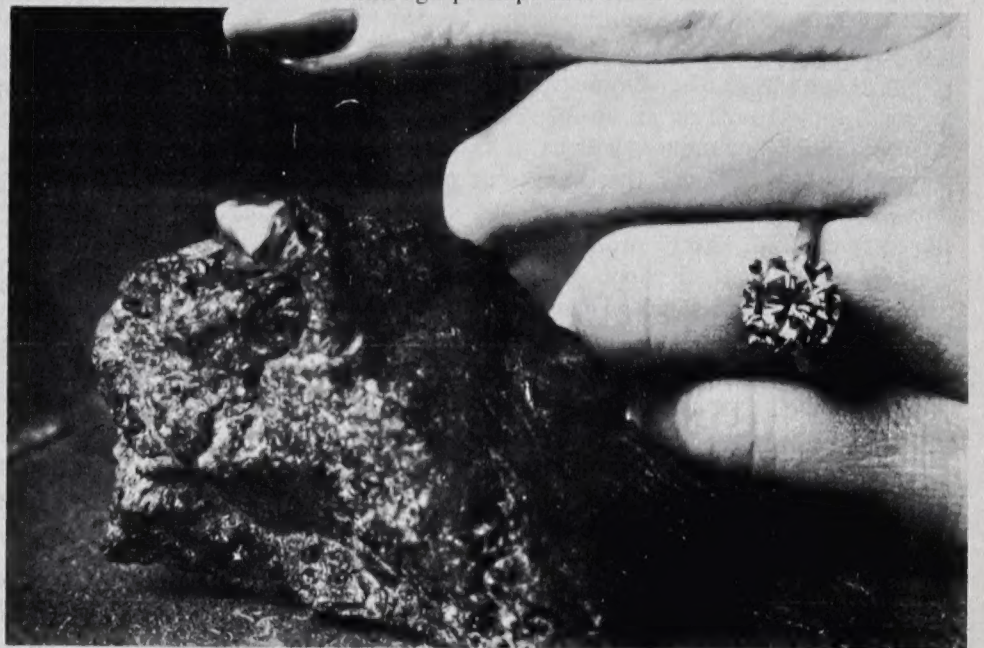

Not everyone, however, can wear their hair long. There's still room in 1980s style for the layered look, although perhaps shorter on the top and bottom than what we've seen in the past.

And then there's the trend to shorter hair we've all been waiting for. For three years, in fact. This summer, however, it probably will happen. There are a lot of girls who tried but failed to grow their hair back in with a permanent wave. So they'll likely cut it and start over again.

The result will probably be a shorter, sculptured look at the back and neckline.

Anyone who has to shell out for oil, tires, insurance and gas can wonder with cause why they call 'em "freeways."

Since their discovery in 600 B.C., the brilliant beauty of a diamond has never ceased to fascinate the minds of men. Once worn as a symbol of power and prestige, they are today recognized as the birthstone of April and the symbol of eternal love. But few realize that a rough diamond in matrix bears little resemblance to the finished stone. The precision placement of 58 tiny facets on its surface transforms a homely crystal into a brilliant gem.

Diamonds — nature's masterpiece

Diamonds, the birthstone for the month of April, were once coveted by kings and potentates as a symbol of power and prestige. And today, although they reign supreme as the symbol of eternal love, their effulgent beauty has never ceased to fascinate the minds of men.

In his book, Diamonds Are Forever, author Ian Fleming was so enraptured by this rare gem, that he dramatically described its magical allure as James Bond examined a prized 20-carat blue-white diamond handed to him by 'M': "What he now held had a heart of blue white flame. The infinite colours reflected and refracted from its depths and lanced into his eyes like needles..."

"Now Bond could understand the passion that diamonds had inspired through the centuries... among those who handled them and cut them and traded in them."

"It was a domination by a beauty so pure that it held a kind of truth, a divine authority before which all other things turned to clay."

To own a diamond is to possess a piece of the dawn of creation, as we know it. The origin of this precious stone dates back millions of years.

Paradoxically, diamonds are composed of one of nature's most common elements — carbon, like the lead in a pencil. Relentless heat and pressures deep under the earth's surface crowded the diamond's carbon atoms together until they crystallized. Eventual volcanic eruptions forced the diamond-embedded kimberlite rock up through pipe-like channels toward the earth's surface.

Diamond-bearing kimberlite deposits, born over millions of lifetimes, are currently being mined in Africa, Russia, South America, Australia and Canada. However, over 250 tons of ore must be mined and processed to produce a one carat rough diamond.

Dynamite blasts break up tons of diamond-bearing kimberlite (or blue ground) in the volcanic "pipes." Massive machine operations bring the ore to the surface in high speed "skips."

Huge crushers break up the softer rock without damaging the diamonds. Then the ore goes through a series of washings until only a concentrated diamond-bearing residue remains. This concentrate is passed through an X-ray separator, or grease table, which isolates the gems-in-the-rough.

It took the knowledge and ingenuity of man to cut and polish these glittering stones into brilliant jewels to timeless beauty.

In the 15th century important discoveries were made which resulted in much brighter stones. Today cutters are able to give the diamond more brilliance than ever before by a precise, mathematical arrangement of the 58 facets ground on to each stone.

Diamond cutting is a long and painstaking operation. Some large stones are cleaved, or split along their "grain", like a log. But most stones are sawed across the grain by a thin blade coated with diamond dust and revolving at high speed. Sawing even a small diamond can take hours.

Then the stone is set onto a lathe, and its corners are rounded off by another diamond held against it. This is called rounding or girdling.

Next, the diamond is set into a holder against an iron "turntable" coated with a mixture of oil and diamond dust. One by one, the facets or tiny planes, are ground onto the diamond, each set at a precise angle to its neighbouring facets. About half the weight of the rough diamond is lost in the cutting.

In our computerized technological age, diamond-cutting is one of the few "old world" master craft skills that still requires the judgement and hands of man.

And although the mining process is mechanized today, men literally have to "move mountains" to recover their precious diamond content. This is one of the reasons a diamond is so rare and expensive.

Born of the earth and fire, eons and ages ago, and crafted by man's exacting expertise, the matchless glory of a glittering diamond casts its own spell on today's lovers — and the young at heart!

Cottagers can buy waterfront

The Ministry of Natural Resources has announced it will let cottage owners buy the 66-foot shore line allowances in front of their homes for the administrative costs only.

The strips around most Ontario lakes had been reserved during Queen Victoria's reign as crown land for use by fisherman, lumberman and "mariners in distress," a ruling which was upheld recently by a Victoria County Judge.

Hubert Moss, a Peterborough high school teacher, has been fighting for the shoreline of his Maple Lake Summer home in Haliburton County since he was convicted of blocking it in 1974.

Moss said that his legal costs have run into thousands of dollars and "every cottager in this province should make me a donation." He said he'll take advantage of the Ministry offer.

A ministry spokesman said the new policy won't interfere with public use of beaches but will remove major roadblocks many cottagers now face.

Many of them have built docks and boathouses on the strip, not knowing about the allowances.

In the case of Maple Lake, the allowance runs through about the cottages as well as through tennis courts and boathouses.

Grenville Martin elected new OFIA chairman recently

HARCOURT — Grenville W. Martin 43, of Harcourt has been elected chairman of the Ontario Forest Industries Association. He succeeds C. J. Carter of Thunder Bay, chairman and president of the Great Lakes Forest Products Ltd.

Mr. Martin, a native of Haliburton, is president of G. W. Martin Lumber Limited and has been associated with the forest industry for more than 25 years.

The OFIA comprises three boards which are representatives of the three major categories of the forest products industry, — woodlands, pulp and paper manufacturing and lumber, wood processing.

The OFIA which consists of 37 major companies and subsidiaries was established in 1943 to provide its member-companies with a common approach to forest-related problems and government legislation.

Stanhope history to be recorded

Haliburton County historian Nila Reynolds may soon be embarking on a history of Stanhope Township.

The author has written to the township council suggesting that such a project be undertaken. Considered at the April 9 meeting, the proposal received the approval of the council.

According to the plan proposed by the author, the municipality will apply to the Ontario government for the necessary grants to cover the preparation of the history. This funding will be turned over to the author who will then spend up to two years writing and researching the book. Once completed the book will become the property of the township.

According to the author, a similar scheme was used in the preparation of a history of Bancroft. "The book has more than paid for itself," she commented in the letter.

Nila Reynolds is the author of a number of books concerning the Highlands. She wrote "In Quest of Yesterday" a history of Haliburton County, "Dream of Excellence" a history of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts and a number of other works.

In considering the project, the Stanhope council has indicated that it would like the Township of Sherborne, to the north, to be included in the work.

While the project has received the initial approval from the Stanhope council, details of the financial commitment has been completed. Clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain said, "those details will have to be discussed with the author before the final go ahead is given."

Dear Mr. Burke: — The Haliburton Figure Skating Club would like to express their thanks for the excellent coverage given in The Express of the Inter-club Competitions held on March 9th in the Dysart Arena.

The skaters work hard during the season preparing for a competition and there is nothing so rewarding as a picture in the local paper.

The fact that you take the time to verify names and the categories concerning an event such as this is greatly appreciated by everyone.

Very little is reported during the season about figure skaters but your pictures and comments certainly boosted the morale of our young people.

Once again, "thank you."

Tuition fees not unfair premier tells students

Premier Bill Davis told protesting students at a Queen's Park rally that the Ontario Government expects them to pay "only their fair share" in maintaining a quality system of education.

Mr. Davis urged the students to consider the needs of many other groups in society, such as senior citizens, who also deserve taxpayers' assistance.

Those protesting the current level of tuition fees at Ontario's universities and colleges were asked by the Premier to consider the following facts:

- The taxpayers of Ontario are supporting university students generously. In the fiscal year just ending provincial operating grants to universities averaged $4,183 per student and operating grants will be increased by 7.2 per cent in 1980-81.

- In 1979-1980, Ontario students received, in the form of direct assistance, over $70 million in non-repayable grants and over $90 million in federal and provincial loans.

- About 29 per cent of our full-time university students received direct assistance in the form of grants and loans. The average university grant recipient was given a grant of $1,310, while the average loan was $1,180.

- In the current year, a full 26.2 per cent of provincial expenditures go to education. Education is and remains a high priority of the Ontario Government.

- Since the introduction of the university funding in formula 1967-68, tuition fees have been far less than inflation would indicate was necessary. If students had paid inflationary increases, fees in Ontario in 1980-81 would be on average $1,150 instead of $774, (or $851 if universities choose to charge the full discretionary 10 per cent).

- The students' share of university costs, in historical terms, has also fallen. We are a long way from the 1950's when fees represented about 30 per cent of costs. In the fiscal year just ending, fees represented less than 15 per cent of university operating revenues and next year, we do not expect the students' share to rise above 15 per cent. Even if every university charged the extra 10 per cent, the students' share would be only 15.4 per cent.

- The Ontario Student Awards Program which helps students in financial need will be increased to take full account of tuition fee increases.

- We expect students to pay only their fair share in maintaining a quality system of education. We are asking, for example, Arts and Science students to bear an additional $54 tuition per year, or $1.70 a week over a thirty-two week term. If universities use the discretionary 10 per cent, the total increase would be $4.10 per week. The minimum average wage for university students is $3.00 per hour.

Tune your car into Spring

Spring is in the air, and happy thoughts of summer motoring and months of outdoor enjoyment help us cope with these last few wintery days.

After months of ice and snow, slush and salt, your car may need a good spring inspection to continue to give you good service in the warm weather ahead.

A variety of spring tune-up specials will soon be sprouting from many garages and repair outlets. While these service specials are usually a good deal, motorists must not forget that such a tune-up alone is not sufficient to prepare a car for heavy summer driving. After all, many motorists will add a few thousand miles to their cars between now and next fall.

Service specials offered by some repair outlets usually focus on one problem area only. The traditional spring tune-up specials, for example, are concerned mainly with getting the engine into top operating condition.

But if you want to purge the winter sluggishness out of your car, you cannot neglect other areas such as the cooling system, the brakes, steering, tires, and so on. After regular winter driving, it is particularly important to give your car a complete check-over.

Ignition and electrical system

There should be an overall check of the ignition and electrical system.

Check the spark plugs; replace them if necessary. Check and adjust distributor points and condensers; replacement may be necessary on cars not equipped with electronic ignition.

The coil, distributor cap, rotor and ignition wiring should be checked and thoroughly cleaned to get rid of the accumulation of road salt, oil and dirt which can result in difficult starting and fuel waste, especially in damp weather.

Inspect air and fuel filters; replace them if necessary.

Check and adjust the ignition timing, choke and engine idle, always following the manufacturer's specification.

Thoroughly clean and test the battery and the connections. Check the level in the battery and test the electrical output of the alternator. Inspect the alternator and fan belts to make sure they are not frayed or loose.

The above checks are usually included in a spring tune-up package, but the following points are just as important to get your car into top running condition.

Cooling system

Check the condition of the coolant; most experts recommend anti-freeze solution all year-round, instead of water. About every two years, flush out the radiator and replace the coolant because old mixture loses its rust-inhibiting effectiveness.

Test the cooling system for leaks and inspect the condition of all hoses and belts. Check the proper operation of the thermostat and radiator cap, following the manufacturer's specification.

General

Consult your owner's manual for the frequency of oil changes and replacement of oil filters. Replace winter oil with a summer grade or multi-grade oil. As oil is considered to be the life blood of your engine, it is important to keep your car properly lubricated.

All fluid levels and changes must conform to the manufacturer's specifications: the automatic transmission fluid, the brake fluid in the master cylinder, and the differential fluid.

Remove snow tires. Inspect and properly inflate summer tires, including spare, before rotating and mounting them. Improper tire pressure can decrease tire life and increase fuel consumption.

Check the steering mechanism and wheel alignment; have the wheels balanced and aligned, if necessary. Inspect and adjust the brakes; check drums, lining and the external brake lines.

Check the exhaust system periodically for cracks and rust. The windshield wipers might need replacing after heavy winter use. Make sure all lights are operating properly: head, tail, signal, brake, back-up, licence plate. Is the horn a reliable honker? Last but not least, clean the outside and the inside of the car. Get rid of all build-up of mud, salt, and just plain crusted-on dirt. The carpet under the rubber mats inside the car should be thoroughly dry to prevent rust from eating holes into the floor below the carpet. Give the inside of the car a good vacuum cleaning and wash.

Regular maintenance

For most people, a car is a major financial investment and, as such, should be treated with care. Regular preventive maintenance and occasional repairs can keep it running smoothly for many years.

Experts claim that a properly maintained car, along with good driving habits, can get up to 15 per cent better mileage than a neglected car with careless driving. At the ever-rising price of gasoline, that can add up to substantial savings and is well worth the effort of taking your car for a good check-over at least twice a year.

If you're doubtful about your car's condition, it might be wise to take it to a car inspection centre or diagnostic service centre for a thorough examination. Check the yellow pages of your telephone book.

Whenever you have found a repair facility you can trust, it is wise to become a regular customer. Your mechanic will get to know your car and will be able to locate problems much faster. As he is also interested in repeat business, he will try to give you good service.

For more information on regular maintenance and repairs, ask for The nuts and bolts of car repair, a free booklet available from the Consumer Information Centre, Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, 555 Yonge Street, Toronto, M7A 2H6; call (416) 963-1111, collect.

The car mileage book is available free from the Office of Energy Conservation, 580 Booth Street, Ottawa, K1A 0E4.

Minden curlers pick site, begin building campaign

Minden curlers will launch a campaign this week to raise the estimated $70,000 they'll need to complete a new curling club in the village.

Godfrey Saunders, chairman of the building committee, said plans are being finalized for a four sheet structure, and will be presented to the general membership May 7. Ten days later, the committee hopes to call for tenders. Construction is expected to start July 1, with completion by November 1 of this year.

Anson, Hindon and Minden council last Wednesday gave its approval to the proposed site of the new club, in front of the community centre. It will take up part of the existing parking lot, which will be replaced at the curling club's expense.

Estimated cost of the new building is $320,000. Of that total, $190,000 will come from Wintario. The club already has some $60,000 on hand, leaving approximately $70,000 to be raised to complete the project.

The new building will replace the existing club, which was condemned by the Ministry of Labour because of structural weaknesses. The old club will continue to be used for summer activities by the fair board and other groups, but will remain closed in the winter months.
